TRANSITE TECHNOLOGY RELEASES WHITE PAPER TO HELP GUIDE DECISIONS ABOUT TRANSPORTATION MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS

RALEIGH, NC—July 6, 2011—Transite Technology released a white paper to enable businesses to make the best decisions regarding Transportation Management Systems. It is titled “Knowing When It’s Time for a New Transportation Management System.”

The white paper explores what Third Party Logistics companies and shippers should identify and understand about their current TMS and future transportation needs.

“There are factors the document addresses that people need to consider when determining if they need to upgrade, replace or get a TMS,” Transite’s CEO Geoff Comrie said.

The document presents a series of questions and issues that help companies examine the status, needs and trends of their current Transportation Management Systems that may affect them in the near future. Within the document, the company discusses how the right TMS can help cut costs, improve accountability, increase visibility, enhance flexibility and even turn shipping into a profit center.

Transite believes that companies must approach TMS evaluations with an eye toward the future because these systems provide opportunities to develop growth strategies, streamline processes and cut costs.

The white paper can be viewed and downloaded at Transite’s website: “Knowing When It’s Time for a New Transportation Management System.”
